

Architecture and the American Landscape

HNRS 2030

Tuesday/Thursday 11:00 — 12:30

“We need to understand [nature] as our source and preserver, as an essential measure of our history, and as the ultimate definer of our possibilities.”

— Wendell Berry, “Preserving Wilderness” (1986)

With Berry’s multidimensional conception of nature in mind, this course examines the interrelationship of architecture, planning, and the ever-changing American landscape.

For more information, please contact Meredith Gaglio (mgagli4@lsu.edu)